Re: Request Not to Weaken New York State's Plastic Bag Ban Law

Dear Majority Leader Stewart-Cousins and Speaker Heastie:

We, the undersigned 97 organizations and 908 New York State residents, write today to urge you to reject Part Y of the Governor's Article VII TED proposal in Governor Cuomo's budget bill. New Yorkers use a staggering 23 billion plastic bags each year. Thanks to your leadership, New York adopted the strongest plastic bag ban in the nation. Unfortunately, the Governor's budget proposal would significantly weaken New York's plastic bag ban by allowing thicker plastic bags to be used as reusable bags.

Allowing Thicker Plastic Disproportionately Harms Environmental Justice Communities

Allowing any plastic, reusable or not, would contribute to ongoing environmental damage in low-income communities and communities of color. Plastic production facilities, a subset of the petrochemical industry, are frequently located in low-income communities of color who bear the brunt of the pollution they produce.¹ One stark example of the severe health impacts of the petrochemical industry is "Cancer Alley," the petrochemical corridor of Louisiana. People living in this region are 50 times more likely to get cancer than the average American.²

Not only do residents of this region suffer from high rates of health problems such as miscarriages, cancer, asthma, and COPD,³ but they are also experiencing coronavirus deaths at five times the national average.⁴ A study from Harvard found significantly higher death rates among COVID-19 patients who had been exposed to high levels of air pollution.⁵

Albright, PhD, "Environmental Justice and the Impact of Plastics Production on Nearby Communities: How Science Can Help," The New York Academy of Sciences, March 4, 2021, <https://www.nyas.org/news-articles/academy-news/environmental-justice-and-the-impact-of-plastics-production-on-nearby-communities-how-science-can-help/>

² James Pasley, "Inside Louisiana's horrifying 'Cancer Alley,' an 85-mile stretch of pollution and environmental racism that's now dealing with some of the highest coronavirus death rates in the country," Business Insider, April 9, 2020, <https://www.businessinsider.com/louisiana-cancer-alley-photos-oil-refineries-chemicals-pollution-2019-11>

³ Ibid.

⁴ Rachel Ramirez, "Wake Up Call: As coronavirus ravages Louisiana, 'cancer alley' residents haven't given up the fight against polluters," Grist, May 4, 2020, <https://grist.org/justice/as-coronavirus-ravages-louisiana-cancer-alley-residents-havent-given-up-the-fight-against-polluters/>

Additionally, the disproportionate harms to environmental justice communities does not end with the plastic production phase. The landfills and incinerators that serve as the final resting places of most plastics are also overwhelmingly sited in low-income communities of color.

Opening the Door to Thicker Plastic Bags Will Lead to More Plastic Waste

There is no need to revisit the plastic bag ban because a wide variety of affordable, plastic-free reusable bags are both available and accessible to New Yorkers right now. Additionally, New York's current plastic bag ban allows New Yorkers to bring any kind of bag they choose to pack their groceries or purchases. New York's current law prevents stores from giving out or selling plastic bags.

Opening the door to allow thicker "reusable" bags will enable plastic bag companies to begin mass producing single-use plastic bags with a misleading label on them claiming that they are reusable 125 times. Consumers are unlikely to reuse such bags because some are nearly indistinguishable from other plastic bags, which would lead to an increase in plastic waste and litter.

A Fee on Paper Bags and a Ban on Plastic Takeout and Delivery Bags Would Strengthen the Law

We do not recommend that the law is reopened; however, more responsible amendments would be to require a minimum fee on paper bags and expand the plastic bag ban to include food takeout and delivery bags.

New York's plastic bag ban gives local governments the discretion to impose a fee on single-use paper bags, something that New York City, Albany County and a handful of other communities have done successfully. Opponents argue that this fee poses an undue burden on the state's poorest residents, but this is a false argument. Recipients of SNAP and WIC benefits are exempt from paying the fee, and the paper bag fees collected are given to local governments to use to distribute free reusable bags to residents who need them. Additionally, in places with paper bag fees, low-income communities adjusted well. For example, in Richmond, CA, customers of a discount grocery store chain increased their rate of bringing reusable bags by 48 percentage points.⁶

Changing habits takes time, but just like wearing seatbelts and not smoking in bars and restaurants, New Yorkers are getting in the habit of bringing their reusable bags to stores. The Governor's proposal to change the plastic bag ban would be a step backwards in New York's fight against the plastic pollution crisis. We urge you to reject this proposal.

Thank you for considering our concerns and our request that you do not change the current law.

Sincerely,
